"The Devil Misses Three" is acted by an impressive cast headed by Gene Kelly, who takes a straight dramatic part, and Pao Angel, who is lovely and quite convincing as the German girl who helps the new American couple across the border. It is a story of a man's living in the difficult days at the Munich of 1947.

Jerry Davis wrote a very fine screenplay which pulls no punches on either side. It's all there—the bombed out homes, the bitterness, the German self-pity, the fight for survival.

Much of the picture's effects, including the short at Salzburg and the little local touches, such as the scene in the Mozart, are heightened by the fact that the film was photographed on location. There is an air of realism and complete believability as Kelly's car speeds down the Autobahn, and in the unique, tense and exciting scene.

The supporting cast, headed by Richard and Robert Richman and a number of very good German actors including Wilfried Seyferth and Claus Clausen, gives the picture an even more authentic atmosphere. Almost all characters speak English, and if they don't, the camera does the translating for them.

Kelly as Capt. Jeff Elliot, who returns to Germany for a visit to see a family which once saved his life, finds only Pier alive and working in a cabaret. When he discovers that she is involved in smuggling activities, he helps Military Intelligence nab the Nazi leader by playing along with her. A romantic fadeout follows on the climactic finale.

'Way of the Gaucho At Star Theatre Sun, Mon,

"Way of a Gaucho," Twentieth Century-Fox's lusty Technicolor spectacle of the Argentine pampas, arrives Sunday and Monday, February 1-2, at the Star Theatre with Rory Calhoun and Gene Tierney in starring roles. Based on the popular novel by Herbert Childs, "Way of the Gaucho" tells the adventurous story of a wild horseman who once roamed the great plains of Argentina in the days before wire fences and law, and order. It is also the love story of this horseman and an aristocratic Spanish girl who sacrifices her position in life to cast her lot with him.

The production, which was written and produced by Philip Dunne of "David and Bethsheba" fame and directed by Jacques Tourneur, was filmed in its entirety in Argentina, on the plains and in the mountains of the South American country in an 1800-mile area through San Luis, Cordoba and Entre Rios Provinces.

After nine years of cinecting in a variety of roles ranging from the husky farm boy of "The Red House" to Jane Forman's heroic husband in "With a Song in My Heart," dark-haired Rory Calhoun finally comes into his own as the daring gaucho who defies the world to deprive him of his freedom.

Gene Tierney, as the Spanish beauty who violates tradition, plays her fifth role in a little over a year—her previous triumphs including "On the Riviera," "The Mating Season," "The Secret of Convict Lake," and "Close to My Heart." Extremely popular in South America, Gene found herself the constant target of crowds of well-wishers and autograph hunters. In addition, she was feted by Argentine society in a style reserved for the most important of foreign visitors.

Although Argentine actors make up the bulk of the supporting cast, Director Tourneur used the services of such American favorites as Richard Boone, Hugh Marlowe and Everett Sloane in major roles. Many of the players considered themselves internationalists. Besides Miss Tierney, who went from this to a Clark Gable film in England, Boone recently filmed "Kangaroo" in Australia and Everett Sloane did a film in Italy.

Miss Sylvia Kowalew is forced to take a doctor's sick leave beginning on Feb. 2 for an operation. Her students were having to give her up for a month, but they along with the faculty wish her a speedy and complete recovery.

Mrs. Tyler's Fifth Grade elected class officers as follows: President, Linda Sharp; Secretary, Melvin Burge; Treasurer, Barbara Tartavouille.

Students of the Fifth Grade Geography Class are busy on the map about Canada, and they find it very interesting.

An assembly program will be given on Wednesday, February 1, at 10:30 a.m. by Mrs. Kowalew's class. The following program will be given: Assembly by Mrs. Kowalew's class, a choral recitation, a play, a musical number, and a song.

ENROLLMENT AT PRC IS CONSISTENT

POPULARVILLE — Second semester enrollment figures remain consistent at Pearl River College, Dean A. B. Nicholson revealed.

He announced that 434 students were enrolled in second term work in all departments, compared with 438 at the close of the first term.

"Despite the fact our enrollment is down by a very small percent, we feel that the current figure is encouraging in that an unusually large number of male students left at mid-term to join the service." We had an above normal enrollment of new students entering college for the first time and transfers," Dean Nicholson said.

Seventy-nine college sophomores will be candidates for graduation on May 17, 48 male students and 31 female. Freshmen total 162 in the college division, with 107 male and 55 female.

Eleven students are entered under special college programs.

Eight students are enrolled in the school of cosmetology, which trains young ladies as beauticians and is the first public school course of its kind in the state. New Students may enter the department at any time, Nicholson stated.

High school seniors number 39 and 51 juniors are enrolled in that department of the college.

Five vocational training classes have 884 students enrolled. This figure has shown a steady increase since the start of school, with Korean veterans entering at regular intervals.

A. V. Lincks, vocational coordinator, reminded that discharged veterans could enter any of the vocational training classes at any time. Courses are offered at Pearl River in sign painting, cabinet making, auto mechanics, refrigeration and air conditioning and auto body and fender repair.

Exploration in the southwestern area of the state has been consistently active, but two discoveries during the past year in other areas, extended this work. The Muldon gas-condensate field in Monroe County in northeast Mississippi has launched a systematic search of this area of the state. Another discovery at Maric stimulated explorations in the south and southeast portions of Mississippi.

Mississippians also cashed in on their natural and man-made recreational, scenic and historic attractions. In 1952 on tourists dropped an estimated $268,082, 584 into the cash registers of the state, a gain of $18,292,996 over the previous year.

Yet even brighter prospects were in store for 1953 with completion of a new 26-mile long sand beach along the Mississippi's popular Gulf Coast, completion of a new four-lane highway to serve that resort area and the installation of additional facilities for serving the thousands of visitors who flock to that area annually.

Other areas saw the establishment of more roadside parks for motorists, elimination of tolls across the Natchez bridge, and the establishment of historical markers throughout the state to guide visitors. A new state park at Sardis, popular north Mississippi recreation area, was also begun.

Ending 1952 with a balanced budget despite the largest legislative appropriation in history, Mississippi found itself entering 1953 with money in its treasury and the prospects for future revenues excellent.

For education the state appropriated $50,000,000, its biggest sum. More white and negro schools, both elementary and high schools, were provided in all areas; and the state, business conditions were good, income and wages were at a new peak, farm income was growing, the health of the people was better safeguarded, the education of their children insured, and they were riding over more and better roads, and generally more prosperous than at any time in their history.

Two mammoth industries on which construction was started during 1952 were the Westinghouse Electric Corporation's multi-million-dollar fluorescent lighting fixture plant at Vicksburg, Tex., and the Alexander Smith & Son Street Company's $4,500,000 plant at Greenville.

The Westinghouse plant when completed in the fall of this year is expected to employ between 500 and 800 persons and provide the area with a $2,000,000 annual payroll. It will be the nation's largest lighting plant of its type.

The Greenville plant, also expected to be completed this year, will represent an investment of approximately $10,000,000. Outlets of the city voted $4,760,000 in BAWI bonds for its establishment.

And at the same time two Mississippians established new air records for the state. Dick Johnson, national soaring champion, established a new record with a plane of his own design at the National Soaring Contest last year, and 14-year old Doug Bradley, Jr. of Tupelo made it a grand sweep for the state by winning the National Junior Championship in the same contest.

In almost every field of endeavor Mississippi made strides in '52.

Industry was on the move to the state, business conditions were good, income and wages were at a new peak, farm income was growing, the health of the people was better safeguarded, the education of their children insured, and they were riding over more and better roads, and generally more prosperous than at any time in their history.

reminded that discharged veterans could enter any of the vocational training classes at any time. Courses are offered at Pearl River in sign painting, cabinet making, auto mechanics, refrigeration and air conditioning and auto body and fender repair.
